- A few notes about cold weather camping...
 - Air beneath you while you are sleeping is your worst enemy when ambient temperatures drop.
 - If you bring a cot or air mattress, make sure that you have some type of insulating material below you (ex. Fill up the empty space below a cot with blankets, extra clothes, layer blankets beneath your sleeping bag, etc.).
 - Change into new dry clothes when you go to bed. Pay special attention to dry socks and a winter stocking cap. Your body loses a huge amount of heat from your head and your feet and these two items could be the difference between a great night of sleep and shivering all night.

- Plates, utensils, cups (bring a camp mug if you have one)
- Food for each meal that you registered for on the survey
